Tary Arterburn is one of the founding principals of Studio Outside. His design leadership merges his natural energetic spirit and often guides experimental and innovative design. This is evident throughout his work from the big picture to the smallest, most precise detail. Tary's dynamic presence, charm, and passion for building the best projects for his clients are infused throughout the office and projects of Studio Outside. He is internationally recognized for his design practices and ability to personalize new and existing client relationships. Generosity, level-headedness, and sound judgment add to his design rigor, heavily rooted in regional nuance, crisp innovative details, and systems. Notable residences, expansive ranches, museums, botanical gardens, and environmental education facility commissions also populate his work.

Tary has inspired and energized his projects and teams for several decades, creating projects infused with nature, art, and technology. Continually involved with landscape architecture education, he currently serves on the advisory boards of Louisiana State University and the University of Texas at Austin. He teaches graduate classes at the University of Texas at Austin School of Architecture and the Longwood Fellows Program. Tary has received six National ASLA awards and 27 Texas ASLA and regional design awards.
