

ANDREW DUGGAN

ASLA | Principal / Partner

Andrew Duggan leads projects which seek to provide visitors with engaging experiences in both natural and developed landscapes. His familiarity with the public process and the importance of accountability to the community is an asset on all scales of site planning and design. He is comfortable navigating the requirements of government funded projects, a skill easily adapted to jobs in the private sector. Andrew's projects focus on interpretive and educational experiences, carefully maintaining the project vision while monitoring budgets and programming constraints. Youth camps are a particular passion for Andrew, and he seeks to forge a connection between mission and an inspiring experience of the natural site environment.

When not at the office, Andrew enjoys carpentry and raising four young children. Some of his service work has included serving on the strategic planning, master planning, and building committees at All Saints Catholic Church in Dallas. He has also volunteered his expertise guiding the City Arts Master Plan in Richardson where he lives, and he is a co-Navigator in the YMCA Adventure Guides.
